BYNG LEADS BIG ATTACK

NEW BRITISH DRIVE

London, Aug. 21.—(1 p. m.)—General Byng, hero of the spectacular British advance at Cambrai last year, directed the British advance today north of the Ancre. The attack was on a nine-mile front and was a complete surprise. At 10 o'clock British troops had advanced from two to three miles.

London, Aug. 21.—British troops early today struck forward on a wide front north of the Ancre River in a new offensive. In his report to the War Office at noon Field Marshal Haig reported that satisfactory progress is being made. The "zero" hour was five minutes before 5. Exactly on the minute the British troops went over the top all along the line. The British also improved their positions between Festubert and the Lawe, scoring an advance. They also occupied La Touret.

"We attacked at 4:55 this morning on a wide front north of the Ancre River," the War Office report said. "Our troops are reported to be making satisfactory progress..

"Yesterday afternoon a hostile attack, accompanied by heavy bombardments against our new positions south and north of the Scarpe, was completely repulsed.

"We improved our positions slightly in the neighborhood of Fampoux, taking several prisoners.

"We advanced our line during the night between Festubert and the Lawe River and are now in possession of La Touret.

"Early this morning English troops carried out successful local operations in the Locre sector over a front of a mile. All objectives were taken, together with a number of prisoners."

By International News Service.

Paris, Aug. 21 (Noon).—The French continued to make progress today on all fronts, the War Office announces. The statement says:

"There was no change in the situation between the Oise and the Aisne during the night, the enemy failing to make any action.

"This morning, our troops continued to make progress on all fronts, and Carlepont and Cuts have fallen into our hands.

"We gained ground after the sharpest fightest west of Lassigny and repulsed several surprise attacks made by the enemy on the Champagne."

MINISTER IN MYSTIC CULT?

Hall, Held for Wife Murder, Said to Exert Strange Influence Over Women in Church

Wells, Me., Aug. 21.—Strange stories of a mystic cult of which the Rev. Henry H. Hall, accused of wife murder, has been a leader, were heard today.

The accused man, who has been pastor of Calvary Baptist Church since January, is held without bail in the York County jail at Alfred.

It was said today that when the State's case is fully shown there will be startling revelations of a bizarre cult and of the powerful and psychological influence which some men of strong personality wield over women of strongly religious nature.

"SISTERS" DEFEND HIM.

York County is splitting into camps for and against Hall, some of his staunch adherents include women, who are described as "sisters in the faith."

The government took another forward step today in exhuming at Harrington the body of Hall's wife, Mrs. Minnie Stevens Hall, for an autopsy.

Deputy Sheriff Ernest L. Jones of Kennebunk and Medical Examiner John A. McDonald of East Machias went to Harrington for that purpose.

MOTHER DEFENDS GEROW GIRLS.

In the opinion of the authorities the autopsy will show that the preacher's wife received a fractured skull, two fractured wrists, broken ribs and internal injuries. They contend that all these injuries could not have been caused by a thirteen-foot fall.

They point out that if she fell in such a way as to break her wrists the force of her fall would have been broken enough to prevent her skull from getting fractured. Had the woman landed on her skull, the authorities contend, it would have been unlikely that she would also have suffered broken ribs and internal injuries.

New Emergency Food Kit for Yankees on Firing Line

Washington, Aug. 21.—A special reserve ration for use in the trenches and under fire-line conditions in France has been adopted, after careful study, by the subsistence division of the Quartermaster Corps, it was announced today. Packed in camouflaged iron tins, hermetically sealed, each container holds about twenty-five rations and weighs ten pounds.

The ration is used only in emergencies, for under normal conditions the men in the trenches receive hot, freshly cooked food.

Italian Submarine Sinks Austrian Ship in Port

Rome, Aug. 21.—The Italian submarine F-7, commanded by Captain Fiannola, in a daring exploit has sunk a big Austrian steamer, the Admiralty announced.

The submarine penetrated the mine zone in the Gulf of Quarnero, where she sent the Austrian vessel to the bottom with a torpedo, then returning safely to her base.

ROOSEVELT ASSAILED BY GARMENT WORKERS

New York, Aug. 21.—The United Garment Workers of America yesterday issued a denunciation of Theodore Roosevelt for his recent attack on organized labor for asking a new trial for Thomas Mooney, the convicted California labor leader. The statement says the American Federation of Labor has only detestation for dynamiters and I. W. W. methods, but believes Mooney did not have a fair trial and that a new trial is absolutely necessary.

New York, Aug. 21. — Mrs. Justina Mills Underhill and her daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Porter, united yesterday in a drive against Rawson Underhill, wealthy stock broker and clubman. In her application for $2,000 a month alimony, Mrs. Underhill said her husband, fifty-seven, was spending money on Miss Marion J. Dorr, a stage beauty. The daughter said he was maintaining an apartment for Miss Dorr in West Seventy-second street.

BASEBALL MADE PART OF FRENCH ARMY TRAINING

Paris, Aug. 21.—The French war ministry has ordered baseball included as a part of the general army training, believing athletics a great aid to the average soldiers and baseball particularly helpful in hand grenade practice. General Vinal today asked Johnny Evers of the Cubs and Hayes fame to instruct his corps and Evers left immediately upon his mission, taking with him two well known ball players.

HINDENBURG IN LUDENDORFF'S PLACE IN WEST

Rome Hears That Hero of Mazurian Lakes Has Been Called to Chief Command

Rome, Aug. 21.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg has been called to the west front by the Kaiser to replace General Ludendorf, according to the Stamon. The Giornale d'Italia claims to have received news that the agitation in Germany against the Crown Prince as a result of the German failure on the Marne, has been so strong that the Kaiser has granted the Crown Prince six months leave of absence.

Paris, Aug. 21.—General Ludendorff, in an order of the day of August 4, styles the steady German withdrawal a "strategic necessity" and attributes the allied successes to the "surprise" in the attacks beginning July 18.

The order, which was captured by the allied forces recently, says only the surprise of July 18 gave the allies any particular advantage, the attacks "breaking down bloodily." The German retirement was due to the needs of rear liason the order said.

TRIBUTE TO AMERICANS.

"The Franco-British infantry generally operated circumspectly. Americans fighting vigorously but less skillfully," the order related.

The whole order apparently was concocted in an effort to buck up the waning spirit of the German people. It continued:

"All sides have been heavily reinforced, but I have a feeling that from all sides the enemy's attack is viewed with some apprehension. Nothing justifies apprehension if our troops are vigilant and do their duty."

TANKS WERE EFFECTIVE.

The order said the tanks won their initial successes for the allies, but maintained that they would be useless if the infantry did not let them overtake them and if the artillery was sufficiently echeloned in depth.

General Ludendorff said he welcomed the offensive, which "will only serve to disintegrate the enemy forces."

The defence was held to be a more severe test on the morale of the men than the offence. The order directed that it be read to all troops every day.

BRITISH LAUNCH NEW DRIVE ON ANCRE; FRENCH CONTINUE GAINS

depth of nearly six miles has been made and more than 8,000 prisoners captured.

The advance of General Mangin's forces constitute the gravest menace which has thus far confronted the Germans in the present Picardy drive.

The railroad which is now within easy range of the allied artillery furnishes the only line of retreat for the forces of Von Hutier, who are stationed in the district between Noyon and Lassigny.

MIGHT BE TRAPPED.

These must retire at once or be caught between two fires as the French third army has made fresh gains near Roye, and be forced to surrender.

Half a dozen important towns and villages were captured by the poilus on the new attacking front, despite the bitterest German resistance, and they are now on the southern edge of the dominating plateau north of Vassens, and in the outskirts of Dursecamp Forest. Ooly-Courtil, four miles west of Solssons, Tartiers, Vezaponin, six and a half miles northwest of Solssons, Blerancourt and Cuissy are among the most important places taken.

The sum and substance of the meaning of the new smash is that it constitutes a body blow to the whole German front between the Ancre and Rheims, and that, soon or late, this whole front—some 100 miles—must go back. Cambrai, St. Quentin, La Fere and Laon, the main bastions in the "Siegfried line" once more loom large as the bastions to which the Germans must retire.

GERMAN LINE MENACED.

An idea of the menace presented by Mangin's success to the whole German Aisne-Vesle front may be gained from the fact that at Tartiers the French now stand twenty-two miles in the rear (northeast) of the Germans north of Fismes. At Tartiers, moreover, the Germans have been driven back three miles north of the Aisne. North of Fismes the Germans are still nearly six miles south of the river.

West of the Oise river the army of General Humbert pushed forward to a depth of two miles in the last twenty-four hours, taking the village of Beuvraigne and many prisoners. The German resistance here was stubborn but all actions were of a rearguard nature, showing the enemy is already evacuating the western part of the Lassigny-Roye salient and are only fighting to keep the road clear for the removal of men and war material.

FAIL TO SHAKE OFF HAIG.

On the British front in Picardy the Germans are reacting violently, but have failed to shake Haig's hold on the northern approaches to Roye. No fewer than five spirited assaults were launched near Chilly, some six miles north of Roye. All were beaten back.

In a new advance between Merville and south of the Lys, in Flanders, a front of nearly eight miles, the British captured the villages of Vierhouck, about a mile north of Merville, and La Couronne, less than a mile southeast of Vieux Berquin and, south of the Lys reached l'Epinette, a little more than three miles southwest of the important railroad town of Estaires. Field Marshal Haig's report shows that the British line now runs well to the east of Merville.

German attacks south of the Scarpe (Arras sector) failed. The British made a slight advance east of Fampoux, south of the Scarpe.

The text of Field Marshal Haig's report follows:

"Local fighting has taken place on both banks of the Scarpe River. South of the river hostile attacks upon certain posts which our troops have succeeded in establishing east of the enemy's former front line were repulsed.

ADVANCE NORTH OF SCARPE.

"North of the Scarpe our line has been pushed forward a short distance east of Fampoux after sharp fighting, in which we secured a few prisoners.

"Further ground has been gained by us astride the Lys. Our troops have gained l'Epinette and the area east of Merville.

"North of Merville we have taken Vierhouck and Lacouronne.

"A raid attempted by the enemy northeast of Locre (southwest of Ypres) was repulsed."

Fog and Tanks Blamed by German Editors for Successes of the Allies

Washington, Aug. 20—The Austro-Hungarian press is beginning to express real concern at the failure of the Germans to stop the allied advances in the Picardy region, says an official dispatch from France today.

It attributes the initial victory of the Franco-British forces to fog, tanks and to every bits at the insufficiency of the German defensive system.

The Neue Freie Presse admits that the combination of a "fog and tanks make it very difficult to prevent initial success by the enemy." The Zeitung, after commenting on the first successes of the allied armies, remarks gloomily that the allies "have the industrial developments of three countries at their disposal, as well as the raw products of the whole world, and may yet be able to speed up the construction of tanks en masse."

LEWIS ASSURED WAR MAY END WITHIN YEAR

Premier Clemenceau Optimistic —Allies Will Hammer German Lines All Winter

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 21.—That the present American-British-French alternate offensives along the western battle front will continue throughout the coming Winter was the here today.

They based this belief on their interpretation of the reported interview between United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois and Premier Clemenceau of France.

The latter, according to Lewis, told him that the war will have ended within another year. This means, the military men say, that the various offensives will continue and many look for a heavy blow being struck early in September possibly at a point that heretofore has been comparatively immune.

BOMBING U-BOAT BASES.

The report from London that the anticipated American naval bombardment of German submarine bases has commenced is highly significant. The navy has been massing its bombing planes and its highly-trained aviators in France and ngland and it is only fair to assume that the bombing of the bases in Flanders is preliminary to a general and continued endeavor to rid the German bases from the air.

In the absence of any official report from Admiral Sims, officials can only conjecture as to what has been accomplished. However, the start was made on August 15, when Ostend and Zeebrugge were both attacked. It is believed here that in both cases the attacking forces got back unscathed. It is expected that from now on there will be frequent announcements that the naval planes are continuing in action.

PLEASES OFFICIAL CIRCLES.

It has been the belief of the American army and navy experts here that a fre use of bombing planes would accomplish much in crushing the German morale. Because of this belief the announcement that at least the naval planes are in action has caused pleasure in official circles.

While the naval forces are assailing the German bases it is considered certain here that frequent attacks will be delivered by the combined armies against the German flanks. The French high command would like very much, it is known, to have the Germans driven out of France by the end of this year, and it is not likely they will be permitted to strengthen their permanent lines along the former Hindenburg line if that can be prevented. With an army of four million promised for France by next June, it is not expected that any planned allied offensive will be held up either through lack of men or materials.

METHODISTS GIVE RED CROSS AMBULANCE

The employees of the Methodist Book Concern, Boston and other cities have given an ambulance to the Red Cross which will soon be doing service in France. It cost $3,000 and bears the plate:

"Donated by the employes of the Methodist Book Concern."

There are sixty-seven stars in the Methodist Book Concern service flag and the first gold star has just been added.

GERMANS ABUSE THEIR FRENCH PRISONERS

Infraction of Rules Means Two Weeks in Cell and Food Once a Week

Washington, Aug. 21.—Inhuman treatment of French prisoners in German camps is set forth in detail in an account by a French soldier who escaped. His recital, which tells of outrages similar to those reported in camps where American prisoners of war are held, was made public today by the French Embassy.

Prisoners, the account says, are entirely at the mercy of their guards, who beat them at the slightest provocation. The least infraction of a rule is punished by two weeks in a dark cell, with food once a week and hot soup every fourth day.

The soldier was confined at Neuf-Brisco and this is his description of it:

"The camp was divided into two distinct parts: The ordinary camp, including 180 prisoners, and the reprisal camp, with ninety. In the latter the officers were compelled to do the same work as the men, though such was not the case in the former.

"During the whole month of January the prisoners slept out of doors in the snow without any blankets, an average space of one square yard being allowed each man.

"During the following month they were interned in a hut—eleven square yards—put up in the ditches of the fortress, but deprived completely of any sleeping equipment. The prisoners had to sleep on boards without any straw mattress or blankets.

"In March they were transferred to larger barracks, bare of furniture.

"As to food, it was quite inferior."

Escaping prisoners face an unhappy lot when captured. They are immediately imprisoned and then worked in the mines of Westphalia or are used for sanitary work in the swamps of Poland.

Heroic French Troops Smash Through Germans Far Ahead of Comrades

By ROBERT S. DOMAN,

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Aug. 21.—One French patrol taking part in the new attack launched yesterday between the Aisne and Oise rivers smashed through the German line at one point far ahead of their comrades. They fought their way into a strong German position and held it for a time. Then the Germans massed a superior force and counter attacking drove the position.

A French General came up just as the patrol was beaten back.

"My friends," he said, addressing the troops, "you took that trench without orders from me. Now it will have to be retaken. Wine that is drawn must be drunk."

A few minutes later the French troops went charging back into the German position and that time they stayed.

Scores of tales reached Paris today of individual heroism in capturing the victorious advance. The German resistance was greater than it has been at any time lately, but despite this the French fought their way forward at every designated point.

A French lieutenant, though four times wounded, raised himself from the ground and yelled his orders to his men to go forward and capture the objective. His troops obeyed and took the position.

A corporal, the sole survivor of a machine gun crew, was captured by the Germans. He escaped, regained his gun, and turning against his captors, killed them.

ALL male persons who have reached their 21st birthday since June 5, 1918, and on or before August 24, 1918, must register on August 24, 1918. These men should consult with local draft boards as to how and where they should register.

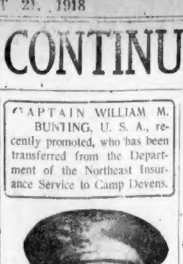
CAPTAIN WILLIAM M. BUNTING, U. S. A., recently promoted, who has been transferred from the Department of the Northeast Insurance Service to Camp Devens.



Captain William M. Bunting of Boston, who has just been promoted from a lieutenancy to captain in the office of the adjutant at Camp Devens, entered the war service over a year ago in the War Risk Insurance Department of the Department of the Northeast, where he rose rapidly to be assistant in charge of the department.

He was graduated from Harvard in 1908, after spending four years at St. Mark's School, Southboro, where part of his military training was obtained.

Captain Bunting is considered one of the most efficient officers in the management of details, and will be missed at the Department of the Northeast.

ONE YANK EQUAL TO 4 BOCHES, HE WRITES

Corporal Gorman of South Boston Says Andrew Square Bunch Is in Thick of It

In a letter received by Edward Gorman of No. 41 Rogers street, South Boston, from his son, Corporal Edward Gorman, Co. L, 101st Infantry, it would seem that the young soldier was blessed with a charmed life. The company he has been with has swagged in many battles and men fell killed and wounded all around him, but fortunately he has escaped injuries. His letter follows:

"Under the Spreading Shrapnel.

"A Hot Corner in France.

"Dear Dad—Just a few lines to let you know that the pride of the Gorman domicile is still in good health in spite of several attempts on the part of the Boches to make it otherwise.

"I suppose you think I am holding down a bomb proof job miles from the front, but it is not so. I have been in every display of fireworks in which our company has been in, but I have had lots of luck. You will see in the papers soon and when they give us permission to write relative to it, I will have a masterpiece to send you. It will be entitled, "Going Over the Top."

"If mother worries as little as she will always be happy and smiling. Of course I think of you and mother and the little sleeping room I used to occupy in the old home on Rogers street, often, but that won't end the war, so we think mostly of how many Boches we can wallop the next time we get a chance to rap them. We are not half the scrappers we thought they were. One American is as good as four of them, and if that American happens to be Johnny Donnelly, the gentle fellow from Andrew square, he is good for eight of them.

"Butler, John D. McDougall, Mike Quinn and the other Andrew square guards wish to be remembered to the good people of Broadway, who can feel assured that any follower of Kaiser Bill who gets close to the above bunch will receive the shock of their young German lives.

"Until all of love to all, from your son,

"CORPORAL EDDIE GORMAN.

German Order Claims Bloody Losses in the Allies Drive of July 18

Paris, Aug. 21.—A captured German order of the day signed by Ludendorff himself, asserts that only on July 18 did the Allies gain a tactical advantage, due to the surprise element but that the attacks on the whole "broke down with bloody losses."

The order points out that the tactics employed were prompted by the necessity of keeping the line intact.

"The French and British infantry," says the order, "generally executed circumspectly. The American fought more vigorously, but less skillfully."

The whole order has all the earmarks of an attempt to buck up the German army spirit.

CARUSO UNABLE TO "SING HIS HAPPINESS" WITH YOUNG BRIDE

'SWEETEST GIRL WHO LIVES'

Tenor, Noted for Love Affairs, Marries Miss Benjamin, New York Lawyer's Daughter

New York, Aug. 21.—Enrico Caruso, the noted Metropolitan Opera Company tenor, has just been married here. The bride is Miss Dorothy Benjamin, daughter of Park Benjamin, of No. 276 West Seventy-third street, patent lawyer and naval and electrical expert.

The ceremony was performed at the Marble Collegiate Church by the Rev. Oliver Paul Barnhill. Bruno Zirato, Signor Caruso's personal secretary, acted as best man, and Mrs. John S. Keith as matron of honor. Following the ceremony there was a dinner and reception at the Hotel Knickerbocker.

"I am the happiest man in the world," declared Caruso, after the ceremony. "I cannot say — I could not even sing—my happiness. I have married the sweetest, most charming girl who ever lived."

EDUCATED IN CONVENT.

The tenor's bride is twenty years his junior. She was born at Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y.

She made her debut into society about four years ago, after completing her education at the Sacred Heart Convent.

Her father, who served as a naval officer in the Civil War under Farragut, has written much upon naval affairs. She has a brother, Sergeant Romeyn Park Benjamin, now in France with the American expeditionary forces who has been wounded three times.

The noted singer's romances have been much in the limelight. At least five women have been reported engaged to him, and several lawsuits have resulted.

Mme. Gluchetti, who claimed to be the mother of his two children, came to America and made something of a scene about six years ago.

Later it was reported that she had been sentenced to a year in prison in Italy for slander. Elsia Gianelli, a Milan shop girl, secured a breach of promise judgment against him in 1913, an appellate court later reversing the judgment but delivering Caruso a lecture.

Mildred Meffert, a New York woman, sued him for $100,000 in 1914, but settled for $5,000, for which sum she relinquished a bundle of letters.

BECOMES WANDERER.

Enrico Caruso, easily the world's first operatic tenor, began life as a singer at ten pence a week in a church when he was a small boy. When he was twelve his father first chastised him for some offense of school rules, then apprenticed him to a mechanical engineer.

He loathed the work, his soul even at that tender age longing for the career of an artist. And later he proved both with voice and pocketbook he has great aptitude for sketching—that he had the artistic temperament.

When his mother died three years later, the turning point came for him. He announced his intention of following his bent, and was told by his father, "Be a mechanic or starve." He did neither, although many times he closely approached the latter.

He became a wanderer, his only weapons against a cold world being his voice and a wonderful physique. He picked up a precarious livelihood singing in private homes and at church festivals, and declared he was never unhappy nor altogether discouraged, even when his stomach cried aloud for food.

His nearest approach to discouragement was when Vergine, the famous teacher, told him his voice was too weak ever to be of real value. However, he succeeded in persuading Vergine to give him two lessons, at the conclusion of which the teacher grasped his hands and expressed unlimited belief in his future.

Caruso's studies were interrupted by enforced military service for Italy. After a year a major heard him singing "Spring Song" as he sat polishing buttons, and arranged for his release, his brother taking his place.

His debut in opera was made at the age of twenty-two in the Teatro Nuovo, at Naples, and the great singer frankly admitted it was a failure—largely owing to the character of his audience, comprised chiefly of disappointed composers.

SCORES TREMENDOUS HIT.

He continued studying, singing in theatres whenever opportunity offered, until November, 1898, when he appeared as Marcello in "La Boheme" at the Teatro Lirico, in Milan. That was a tremendous hit, and thenceforth he never was but a success—a succession of triumphs in Italy, France, England, America—in every country of the world.

Caruso was born in Milan forty-five years ago, his parents being Marcellino and Anna Balding Caruso.

He has made a large fortune by his singing and owns four villas in Tuscany, where he has spent much time with his sons. Naples, at America, which he claims as his residence, holds chief place in his affections. It was on the stage of the San Carlo as a Metropolitan Opera Company singer that his reputation became widest.

Caruso was divorced about two years ago.

MASQUE DRAWS NORTH SHORE SOCIETY

Open-Air Performance Given on Estate of Sculptor Grafly at Gloucester

Gloucester, Aug. 21.—The second performance of the "Masque of Mercy," in aid of the local Red Cross chapter, will be given tonight in the little woodland theatre on the Summer estate of Charles Grafly, widely known Philadelphia sculptor, which was attended by several thousands of dollars will be realized.

The masque symbolizes victory of civilization and mercy over brute force and war. It is an original production from the pen of Miss Dorothy Grafly, daughter of the sculptor.

The first performance was a marked success. An unusually large audience of North shore society folk attended, freely applauding the tableaux and dances. People motored many miles to attend, not only because of the object for which it is given, but also because they knew the performance would be an artistic one.

This is the fifth successive year fetes of this character have been given on Mr. Grafly's estate, which bears the unusual cognomen, "Fool's Paradise." The sculptor christened it that because it is situated at "Folly Cove," Lanesville, a suburb of this city.

The masque was given against a background of tall trees. The spectators were seated in a natural amphitheatre with trees, shrubbery and flowers on all sides. Artistic lighting effects arranged by Mr. Grafly were obtained by the use of fishermen's torches secured from Gloucester vessels. One of the interesting "props" was an elaborate decorative patch quilt containing all colors of the spectrum. It was made by Mrs. Eugene Castello, a ninety-year old Philadelphia woman, who died before completing it.

One of the principal features of the fete was the dancing of "Nan" Webb of New York. Her graceful movements brought forth continued applause.

The work of Miss Grafly in the role of Mercy, Mildred Frisbee as the Spirit, and Irene Sherburne as Civilization was excellent.

The music was by Victor Krieton. Mr. Grafly was stage manager. The Red Cross ushers were Mrs. William Geary, Mrs. John Nelson, Mrs. Dayton H. Gee, Miss Agnes Holoran, Miss Nellie Wood, Miss Julia Roach, and Miss Nellie Woodbury.

TO REPAVE STATE STREET DESPITE COST PROTEST

Despite the lengthy Finance Commission report issued yesterday, State street will be repaved. The contract was awarded and approved by Acting Mayor Collins. John Quinn was the lowest bidder. His figure was $34,-666.60.

In a recent report Public Works Commissioner Thomas F. Sullivan stated that on a "nasty" day the windows and buildings along State street are smeared with mud, due to the wretched condition of the street.

The "Fin. Com." in a statement made it plain that this was no excuse for an expenditure of over $34,000.

"The officers and soldiers of the German army are invited to a special celebration in Paris on July 11. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the Crown Prince will deliver an address at the base of the Eiffel Tower."

Equally earnest in his asservation of innocence was Bernard Seidl, Mrs. Law, who has three children, said she had begged her husband not to believe the stories he had heard. She admitted knowing Seidl, whom she described as a perfect gentleman. The case was adjourned until Friday, and Mrs. Law was admitted to $200 bail.

Made Teuton Kiss Every Star in Old Glory

New York, Aug. 21.—A German employed at the Sunyside yards of the Pennsylvania Railroad, at Long Island City, was forced to kiss every star in an American flag Monday evening after he had made remarks about the war that other employes resented.

A young woman in the office there was wearing a cervice pin with two stars. The German stared at the button and asked: "What are you wearing that for?"

"That is for two of my family who are in the service," replied the girl.

"Huh," was his answer. "You mean they are over in France being slaughtered for nothing."

The girl told men in the office what the German had said. A conference was held, and the German was summoned outside the building. He was dragged to the flag pole. The flag was lowered and the German kissed every star.

SUFFRAGISTS ON HUNGER STRIKE RELEASED

Break Fast for First Time in Five Days; Under Care of Physicians

Washington, Aug. 21.—Supported up the jail steps by their friends, too weak to stand alone, the twenty-three suffragists held under sentence for park demonstrations were released. They were assisted to ambulances and waiting automobiles and rushed to the National Woman's Party headquarters where the twenty hunger strikers of their number broke their five-day fast under the care of physicians.

Their release came as a surprise to the women, some of whose sentences ran for ten days longer. At headquarters it was whispered that it came as the result of a conference of very high authorities in the National administration.

Physicians of the women indicated that if they had persisted in their self-starvation another day it might have become necessary for the District authorities to feed them forcibly, a measure to which the authorities were loath to resort. Their release avoided this danger.

Miss Julia Emory, where the twenty-three unbroke she broke her strike, had persisted and had then been refused medical attention.

Together with Miss Alice Paul, their leader; Miss Hazel Hunkins, the beautiful Montana girl, who has carried the American flag at the head of their demonstrations, and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis, seemed in the most serious condition when they were carried from the ambulance into suffrage headquarters. Miss Clara Weld, of Portland, Ore., also were unable to walk.

It is whispered about the district building that the next demonstration will be allowed to proceed without arrests. The authorities have met two hunger strikes and two defeats at the hands of the suffragists.

SEE FERTILE FIELD FOR SUNDAY

Providence Workers Gathering Material In Underworld Haunts for Evangelist

Providence, Aug. 21.—Billy Sunday's opponent, "Demon Rum," will be groggy before the evangelist arrives in this city for his eight weeks' campaign as a result of Federal action in banning sections of the State for defiance of law and decency. That is the belief of many Sunday workers.

It became known today that a canvass of several communities is now in progress and reports setting forth the conditions, they say, will be filed with the evangelist when he arrives. While the workers are said to have mingled in underworld haunts, including houses, cafes, all-night lunch rooms and various other places where it is said great material has been gathered to "help the cause."

A prominent woman worker said: "Mr. Sunday will find fertile ground here for his crusade. While he has visited other sections of this country in no other place has he encountered what will be offered him here. Liquor is the devil. I will say that a number of responsible liquor dealers, who, by the way, are ashamed of their business, have done all in their power to stop the illegal traffic which is conducted nap-hazardly by frantic men who are money mad and are getting every dollar they can out of the business before the calamity overtakes them.

"I personally visited dens in Scranton and North Providence where the doors are wide open Sundays and eager men and boys crowd around the machines all money-mad, or crazy, I don't know which."

TOWN OFFICIALS TAKEN ON GRAVE CHARGES

Many prisoners, including the constable, the village magistrate and prosecutor and six saloonists were taken.

The six Cretan saloonists are held for selling liquor to a soldier in uniform. The village officials may face graver charges. Crete, with a prepondering Teuton population, has been under the eyes of Federal operatives for a number of months.

NEW DRAFT AGE REALIZES 300,000 IN WISCONSIN

Madison, Wis., Aug. 21.—That the change in the draft age as recommended by Secretary of War Baker will bring upward of 300,000 within the draft limits in Wisconsin is the statement of Adjutant-General Orlando Hollen today. The ten-year period, twenty-one to thirty-one years, registered 250,000 men in Wisconsin. The lowering of the draft age to eighteen years and the raising of the draft limit from thirty-one to forty-five years will bring sixteen years within the limits. Adjutant-General Hollen estimates that thirty-one years will not be as high as the average below twenty-one.

OHIO SOLDIER TELLS OF SERIOUS FOOD PROBLEM

East Liverpool, O., Aug. 21.—The effect of patriotic observances throughout the United States of the Federal Food Administrator's regulations was indicated in a letter received by relatives from Thomas Kenney, with the Americans overseas.

"I can readily see now why the people of the United States have been appealed to to save on the food supply," young Kenney wrote. "While we are well fed, better than the rest of them—do not understand that we go hungry, for we do not—I want you to understand that food is a serious thing over here."

"Personally, I cannot but appreciate his action."

Beware of Liberty Bond 'Shark,' Says Mr. Endicott

Beware of Liberty Bond "sharks."

This warning is issued by Henry B. Endicott as executive manager of the Public Safety Committee, in the following statement:

"What I would say to all holders of Liberty Bonds, and this will apply to the forthcoming loan as well, there is no better security in the world. I don't care what the bonds will sell at temporarily, they will be redeemed at maturity by the government at par. Eventually they will in the meantime sell better than at par. If they are not good, then nothing we have in this country is any good.

"Now to the holder who is approached to swap them for other securities—Don't do it. If you really need money and have got to sell your bonds, go to any bank, trust company, or recognized banker or broker, and they will arrange that you will obtain what you are fully entitled to obtain in the disposition of your bonds. Keep away from the money sharks and all of the so-called get-rich-quick security dealers. If you must part with your bonds, part with them for cash only."

FORD PROTESTS RAINSFORD PICNICS

City Councillor Objects to Use of Island by Randidge Fund Excursionists

City Councillor Francis J. W. Ford has protested to the trustees of Rainsford Island and officials of the Penal Institutions Department for allowing children, enjoying the Randidge Fund Excursions, to visit Rainsford Island, a correctional institution.

The Councillor during the inspection of Rainsford Island yesterday noticed hundreds of children from various sections of the city having a picnic on Rainsford Island. Investigation showed that they were under the auspices of the Randidge Fund and that the children of the congested districts to the island daily. Yesterday over 300 visited the island.

The Councillor contends that it is not the proper place to bring young children for an outing. He said:

"This is inexcusable. Someone has made a bad blunder to allow these children to come down here. This is a correctional institution. It does not help the youngsters who come here to see the young lads who are here as inmates. It leaves a bad impression. I shall introduce an order into the City Council for an investigation. They should have their picnics over on the extreme end of Long Island, where they have enough room for years."

GASSING FAILS TO OVERCOME DAN CUPID

Now Worcester Soldier Is to Wed French Maiden Who Nursed Him in Hospital

Worcester, Aug. 21.—Efforts on the part of the Germans to gas "Dan Cupid" were frustrated by Private George J. Crepeau, a member of the Emmet Guards, Worcester company of the 101st Infantry. Away back last Fall, when Private Crepeau's regiment was in a little French village, the neighborhood maidens did not hesitate to make eyes at "dees lofley Asmericaine soldeers." One of the maidens was Yvonne Colinet.

She focused her glances on George and well, maybe when the commander called "eyes right," George was looking the other way. When the grill of the day was over the young people had several hours they could spend together. She discovered that he could speak French and then the way was clear for the development of their friendship.

Then one day the order came to move to the trenches. Private Crepeau and pretty Yvonne were together.

"I'll go in there and get my share of Germans and then I'll come back to you," he said.

"And when you come back I'll be waiting for you," she replied.

George went into battle and was gassed but just enough to send him to a base hospital. Cupid went along and summoned Yvonne to George's bedside as a nurse. Now they're to be married as soon as George is well so local relatives of the soldier have been notified.

SUGAR RESTRICTIONS IN WISCONSIN MADE SEVERE

Madison, Wis., Aug. 21.—In selling sugar for canning purposes grocers are no longer allowed to issue certificates to customers. Purchasers must apply to their local county food administrator or his deputy for canning certificates, and in cases where it is absolutely necessary he will allow them to buy ten pounds for canning. Upon receipt of these the grocers will then sell their customers the ten pounds. The grocers must mail these certificates to the county food administrator on Monday of each week, and he in turn will send a list of merchants together with the amount of sugar they have sold for canning purposes to the sugar division of the State food administration at the State House. The sugar division will mail sugar certificates to the grocers to cover such sales.

John Candler Cobb Tells Shonts How to Make Money

New York, Aug. 21.—John Candler Cobb, of Boston, has gone over the top again in an effort to show the New York Railways Company how to make more money in war times. It is as simple as A. B. C. All T. P. Shonts has to do, according to Cobb, is to cut off night cars when, presto! Expenses won't have any more substance than the holes in a piece of Swiss cheese, and the cars can be run with strap-hangers as passengers at all hours instead of just at rush hours.

Mr. Cobb used some very nice stationery and a perfectly good three-cent stamp to send his valuable suggestion by letter to Mr. Shonts as president of the New York Railways Company. Up to a late hour Mr. Shonts had not cut out any cars.

BOSTON PUBLIC MARKETS OPEN ON SEPT 3

Plenty of Products Assured by Farmers—Daily Sales Start at 6 A. M.

Boston's public markets will open Tuesday, September 3, according to a statement issued at the Mayor's office. Acting Mayor Walter L. Collins has approved the plans.

Plenty of products are assured by the farmers. No pedlars will be permitted to engage in the public market business. The markets will be restricted to farmers who raise products on their own farms.

Markets will be established on the following days at these places:

Monday—City Yard, Childs street, Jamaica Plain.

Tuesday—Columbus avenue, Roxbury Crossing.

Wednesday—Central square, East Boston.

Thursday—Thomas Park, South Boston.

Friday—Monument square, Charlestown.

Saturday—Gibson street playground, Dorchester.

The markets will be opened at 6 o'clock in the morning. The hour for closing has not yet been definitely settled.

The market formerly at Andrew's square, South Boston, is being moved to Thomas Park. The former spot was so dusty that the farmers could not keep their produce in good condition," and the latter place was the most desirable.

The market formerly at Forest Hills is being moved to Childs street, Jamaica Plain, because the latter place is more thickly populated and the farmers objected to the Forest Hills location because it took them too long to sell their wares there.

MANY NAMES FOR AVIATORS TO PICK FROM

Designations Still Pouring In; Eagles, Falcons and Hawks Numerous

If Uncle Sam's airmen who are clamoring for a nice, snappy nickname for themselves cannot find a suitable one out of the many submitted to the AMERICAN in answer to the call, said airmen are hard to suit.

New names are coming in all the time from the AMERICAN'S readers and it would seem as if the name department had been combed bare. But still they come—all sorts of names, good, bad and indifferent. Birds, as is quite natural, continue to be the favorites, with Eagles, Falcons and Hawks predominating.

Here are some of the latest names contributed by AMERICAN readers:

"Falcons," George Bunyard, Newport, R. I.

GIRL GIVEN 20 DAYS FOR WEARING UNIFORM

Hartford, Ct., Aug. 21.—Because she donned soldier's garb as a vacation lark, Beatrice Duke of Newark, N. J., was arraigned in the United States District Court and pleaded guilty to the charge of wearing unlawfully the uniform of a United States army officer, and was sentenced by Judge E. S. As the young woman had been held in the jail here for exactly that length of time, the judge ruled that her penalty run concurrently with her incarceration before trial, and she left immediately for home. The charges of impersonating an officer was nolled.

The Grants were married in San Francisco about thirty years ago. Mrs. Grant's maiden name was Elizabeth Chapman. They have two children, a daughter, who is the wife of a naval officer, and a son, who is an officer in the army. Mrs. Grant's home is in San Diego. She did not contest the suit.

LIEUT. BLACKMUR IS FRENCH TOWN MAJOR

A letter from Lieutenant Paul Blackmur, a Quincy boy with the Third U. S. Cavalry in France, says that he has been made town major of a large town somewhere behind the lines. Lieutenant Blackmur, who is the son of Paul R. Blackmur, the Boston attorney, tells of the duties involved in his new "office."

The town major serves as a sort of intermediary between the American troops occupying the village and the French inhabitants, and when the troops move on the major settles for claims of the inhabitants for breakage and damage.

TINY CRIPPLES HAVE OUTING AT REVERE

"Romp" in Sand and Waves as Guests of Children's Ambulance Service

Forty misshaped, unfortunate, crippled children are romping as well as they can on Revere Beach today, revelling in sand and waves. For the Children's Ambulance Service, inaugurated by Mrs. John Hays Hammond, sun taken them on a picnic, thus adding another to the many debts they owe this kindly charity.

The Service maintains two large motor busses which carries the tiny cripples from their homes to the Massachusetts General and Children's Hospitals for treatment. The busses also take the little ones down to North Scituate where a Summer home has been built, and back to the city again.

More than 8,800 of them have ridden in the vehicle since Mrs. Hammond founded the service in November, 1916, for the purpose of giving the tiny victims of infantile paralysis a chance to receive the after treatment so essential for them to regain the use of their limbs.

Today's picnic serves a double purpose, for it is to show those that the little patients may romp through a never-to-be-forgotten holiday by the sea, but also that interested and charitable grown up folk may see how the little ones have improved under treatment.

They have a chance to see babies, who, a few months ago, seemed doomed never to walk again, getting about nicely with special crutches; while others have so far recovered that they have been able to discard the crutches and rely entirely on braces of one form or another.

They will have a chance, in brief, to see a few of the many things that the Children's Ambulance Service has accomplished.

Mayor Andrew J. Peters has taken personal interest in the work of the service and has written to Mrs. Hammond the following letter:

"May I express to you my appreciation of the wonderful work which the Children's Ambulance Service is doing in Boston to help the little victims of infantile paralysis in our city and its neighboring towns. The cooperation of the ambulance service has brought to these small patients the assistance of our best hospitals in a way in which they could never have received it had the service not been in existence.

"The work must appeal to everyone and I sincerely trust that it will be continued and bring relief to thousands of little helpless ones in our midst."

The children spent all day at Mother's Rest, Revere.

Icicles Form on Eaves of Whitinsville Iron Foundry

Milford, Aug. 21.—According to James W. Magill, assistant foreman on the molding machine job of the Whitins machine works of Whitinsville, icicles formed on the eaves of the foundry. He says he picked off several small ones as he was passing on his way to work.

4 SALOON MEN ARRESTED IN R.I. RAID

Narragansett Pier, Aug. 21.—In a sensational raid on several saloons and alleged gambling resorts early today, High Sheriff John R. Wilcox and his two deputies, together with Chief of Police Frank E. Smith, arrested John McArdle, Lawrence Donley, George Southwick and William Harney, all saloon proprietors.

The men were taken to the police station on the beach road and held on the charge of selling liquor on Sunday. Bail of $100 each was furnished by Frank J. O'Neil, a hotel keeper, and they will be arraigned in the Wakefield court Wednesday.

After arresting the men, Sheriff Wilcox, armed with a bunch of keys entered several hotels where gambling is believed to be conducted. The Gladstone Hotel, Clark's Block, and the White Front were among those entered.

So quiet was the sheriff that nobody knew there had been a raid until Sheriff Wilcox told his story this morning. He crept quietly up the steps and entered each hotel with his own keys. Where he got them nobody knows. He was met at each resort with vacant rooms. Everybody had retired.

Speaking of the raid, Sheriff Wilcox declared:

"The Governor has declared that illegal selling of liquor and gambling at Narragansett Pier must stop. I am sheriff of this county and am here to see that it stops. If gambling continues at the Pier those who participate it will land in jail. I mean business."

SPEAKER COMPLETES PLANS TO JOIN FLIERS

Tris Speaker completed arrangements in Washington today for entering the aviation service, and has announced that if he has a choice in the matter he will attend the Tech Aviation School. Speaker caused general surprise when he registered in June, 1917, as it had been generally supposed that he was over draft age.

GASTON FAVORS HOSPITAL FOR WOUNDED

Colonel William A. Gaston, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, held a conference in Lowell with a number of the leading Democrats in Middlesex County. The meeting was called by Humphrey O'Sullivan of Lowell.

Colonel Gaston announced that at a later date he would make what he believed would be a constructive war program for the State of Massachusetts. He took up one phase of the situation in his speech, stating that he favored immediate construction of a hospital in Boston of 1,000 beds as a preparation for receiving our wounded men in this State.

FAVORS CONCENTRATION.

"Many of our doctors have gone to the front," said Colonel Gaston. "There is hospital bed here and there. The physicians that are left to us cannot be expected to make their rounds all over Boston and do the same work that would be possible if we had a large number of wounded in one hospital. There should be concentration.

"An emergency hospital for our wounded men should be built at the public expense, at the expense of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. I am told that a hospital in Boston and vicinity providing for 1,000 beds will cost approximately $100,000. To build this is the least we can do for our boys.

"I realize more and more the responsibility that is placed upon us to do something in a material way for the soldiers who return home. They will be without work. They gave up their positions to go to the front. It is our duty to help these men. We have great industries here, employing men on war work. We must be ready to provide positions for these men.

"There must be co-ordination with the administration in Washington to carry out this work, and I believe that a Democrat, in full sympathy with the plans for reconstruction of the national administration can serve Massachusetts in this respect better than a Republican.

WANTS WORTHY NOMINATION.

"I am a candidate for the nomination for Governor of the Democratic party, but I do not desire to say anything offensive in regard to any of the other men who are candidates for the nomination, for I want that nomination to be worth while for the man who obtains it, and what I do or say I want to do or say in a manner that will make the nomination worth while.

"I believe this is a Democratic year and that the man with the Democratic nomination will probably be elected Governor in this State. Today for every loyal man there is only one great issue, and that is the war issue."

W. B. BLAKE BELIEVED DROWNED OFF SANKATY

Nantucket, Aug. 21.—Warren Barton Blake, Harvard '07, a former editorial writer of the New York Evening Post, associate editor of the Independent Magazine and later on the staff of Collier's Weekly, was drowned off Sankaty, it is believed. His clothes were found on the beach, and as there is a strong undertow at that point it is quite unlikely that his body will ever be found. Blake was thirty-five years old and was born in Philadelphia. From papers found on his clothes he had evidently been chief of the editorial and historical division of the American Red Cross in Paris.

McAdoo Asks Public to Abstain from Useless Travel

Washington, Aug. 21.—Director General of Railroads McAdoo issues an appeal to the public to refrain from traveling unnecessarily and thereby liberate essential transportation facilities for war purposes. The Director-General explained that he realized there were grounds for numerous complaints of overcrowded trains and unsatisfactory conditions on trains but that these things were due to the great demand upon the railroad systems for troop movements and transportation of coal, food, raw materials and other supplies required for military operations.

SAIL AND SHORE DINNER FOR CREDIT MEN

With a short business session scheduled for today the members of the Retail Credit Men's National Association prepared to enjoy Hub hospitality to the full in a sail down the harbor as the guests of Boston credit men and a shore dinner at the Palm Gardens, Paragon Park.

Today's session consists largely of reports, intermingled with addresses by authorities on credit subjects, and ends at noon to permit the several hundred delegates, with their wives and families, to take the boat to Nantasket early in the afternoon.

A decision of far reaching importance to merchants everywhere in the United States is expected to result from the appointment of a committee to wait upon William G. McAdoo, Federal Director of Railroads, to learn from him whether employes of the various railroads in this country are considered to be government employes now that the government has taken over the roads.

DECISION IMPORTANT.

The decision will have an important bearing on how much credit will be extended to railroad employes if they are considered government employes, as the latter cannot be trusted on failure to meet their bills, while railroad employes can. The question was brought up in the convention by J. K. Cuddy of New York.

The Santa Fe and Union Pacific railways have refused to recognize legal proceedings to collect debts owed by their employes contending that they were in the Government employ. Other railroads are expected to follow suit.

One of the foremost non-essentials during the present war is long time credits, Robert Adams of Cleveland pointed out in an address on credit problems. It ties up large sums of money that should be working for the Government and the merchant.

In order to place the credit customer on the same basis with the cash customer he advocated charging interest on past due accounts in order to keep down the rising cost of merchandise and to put the carrying expense where it belongs.

CURTAILS OVERBUYING

He declared it would curtail overbuying, thus serving another end of government during the war, and would release capital. The convention will later take up his suggestion to charge interest on accounts sixty days or more overdue.

The National Association of Mercantile Agencies which is meeting at the same time placed its entire equipment at the disposal of the Government for use during the war. This will give the Government access to valuable financial information.

The association also elected officers. J. E. R. Chilton of Dallas, Texas, being selected for president for the second time. W. S. Radway, a Boston man, was elected first vice-president. Other officers are W. S. Rauch of Newark, N. J., second vice-president; F. A. Caten of Pittsburgh, third vice-president; J. R. Truesdale of Youngstown, O., secretary and treasurer and R. O. Cohan of Philadelphia, chairman of the advisory board.

EXHUME BODY OF PASTOR HALL'S WIFE IN MAINE DEATH INQUIRY

GEROW SISTERS DENY LOVE MAKING BY MINISTER ACCUSED OF MURDER

Prominently in connection with the case were stoutly defended by their mother, the world.

"Grace and Kate are good girls. They have not committed any crime. They have not been guilty of any indiscretions with the Rev. Henry H Hall."

The two girls stood behind their mother as she talked with an AMERICAN reporter. They nodded their assent to every word she uttered.

Grace and Kate went to Portland following the time the preacher is alleged to have attended to some affairs connected with school life of the older of the two sisters. Grace had been a student in Shaw's Business College.

The two girls first went to the room where Grace lived while in Portland. They removed her personal effects and later notified the principal of the business college that she would have to suspend her education for the time being. It is said that the pastor paid the girl's tuition.

The accused preacher, it is said, first paid attention to Kate, but later devoted much of his time to Grace. When asked if it were true that the clergyman had paid her tuition at school, and whether he had shown signs of love toward her, Grace declared that the charges were untrue.

As she talked Grace held a copy of the New Testament in one of her hands. She asserted that her interest in the accused clergyman was simply that of a parishioner. She stated that his interest in her was the same as he had in any member of his congregation.

ALLEGE LOVE FOR GIRLS.

Despite the denials of the girls the authorities contend that the preacher was much interested in them and in other women who were members of the Calvary Baptist flock. They say that they will prove that love for another was the motive for the preacher's "crime." They point to the fact that "Kate" Gerow often accompanied the pastor on Sundays as he walked along the railroad tracks from the Calvary Baptist Church to the Wells Branch Church, where he also held services. The girl, it is said, attended the first service and then waited for the preacher. After the services at Wells Branch, the girl, it is claimed, would return with the preacher.

These Sunday walks caused considerable comment here, with the result that one of the men members of the Calvary Baptist congregation went to the pastor and informed him that his actions were the cause of talk. The preacher thanked him for his information and a few Sundays later delivered a sermon, entitled "The Rainbow and the Cloud."

DEFENDS OWN ACTIONS.

It was a defence of his actions. Wells asserted that he only wanted to have the young girls of the town lead righteous lives. Among other things he said: "I want to save the girl's soul."

21 Planes Downed by British; Bruges Docks Bombed

London, Aug. 21.—Twenty-one German airplanes were brought down by British flyers and four balloons were sent down in flames, the War Office communique on aviation states. Seven British machines are missing.

Fifteen and a half tons of bombs were dropped by British bombing planes on various German targets, including the docks at Bruges and an aerodrome at Phalempin.

Many of his parishioners were surprised by his sermon. Others accepted the words of the pastor as those of a sincere, God-fearing man wishing to guide troubled souls out of the wilderness of sin.

The authorities admit that their action in having the preacher arrested was not based on any charges made by his wife before her death. While Mrs. Hall was waiting to be removed to a hospital in Biddeford shortly after she was found beneath the railroad bridge, it is said that she asked what had happened.

"Don't you remember, Minnie," her husband is reported to have said, "that we were going herring and that you fell over the bridge into the water?"

"Don't talk to me! don't talk to me," is the reply the dying woman is said to have made.

While Mrs. Hall was at the hospital she was not visited by her husband. As she was unconscious while there, she was unable to make any further statement.

STATE INVESTIGATED CASE.

No case in years has aroused such intense interest in Eastern Maine as this. More than two months ago Mrs. Hall was found mortally injured at the bottom of a creek over which runs the Eastern Div ion Boston & Maine railroad trestle, just south of the Wells depot. Her husband, who was close at hand, declared that she had accidentally fallen over the bridge and thus sustained her injuries, which resulted in death.

That statement was accepted by some, but by others it was questioned. Those who questioned the story of the minister introduced into the affair the names of the two Gerow girls.

Talk was such as to arouse the attention of the authorities. State Detective Fred Tarbox went to Wells on orders from the Attorney-General of Maine to conduct an investigation. The story today has it that Tarbox filed a report in which he made it clear that the death was purely by accident.

That report, however, was far from satisfying to persons in Wells. The story persisted and eventually they reached the ears of Deputy Sheriff Jones. He secured permission from High Sheriff Haven Roberts to pursue an investigation. A day or two later he reported that assistance was needed in the case. Deputy Sheriff Parker of North Berwick was assigned to aid him.

The facts they gathered were presented to County Prosecutor Frank Chesley of Saco. Prosecutor Chesley went to Wells accompanied by the high sheriff and two deputies. They visited the scene of the alleged crime. Prosecutor Chesley looked the affair over carefully and then decided that an immediate arrest should be made.

Investigation revealed that Hall had planned to leave Wells depot for Portland. The officers found him at the depot with his packed bags. Deputy Sheriff Jones informed him that he was under arrest. The party returned to the street level, crossed the little bridge to the house in which Hall and Mrs. Hall had lived together since he arrived in Wells last January.

Hall was told that he might take with him, to the jail in Alfred, anything he cared to excepting only firearms or other weapons.

"The jig is up; it's all over; I'm through here whether I clear myself or not," said the accused man, it is claimed. He pulled the contents of one suit case out, threw them across the dresser and then announced his readiness to make the trip to the jail.

He seemed cheerful and carefree following his arrest and did not at all take the serious turn in his life's affairs to heart.

When arraigned in court he seemed quite surprised to see there defending him Judge George Emery of the Biddeford Municipal Court. Hall told the sheriffs who were attending him that he had not retained counsel, as he didn't have any funds. He conferred for a minute with his attorney and then announced his not guilty plea. A continuance until August 29 was ordered by Judge Bourne.

The known facts in this strange case which the deputy sheriffs have thus far pieced together are these: Hall had been for a number of years pastor of churches in this town, Princeton and other neighboring towns. He had never, so far as they are able to learn, been considered as was merely a man gifted with a fluent tongue and one who had apparently read much and fitted himself for the ministry in that way.

More than fifteen years ago he married Minnie Stevens, a native of this town, daughter of Mrs. Fannie Stevens. To them was born a daughter who is living here with her grandmother. Hall and his wife had never lived through a period that might be termed tranquil, it is said. On the contrary, folks both here and in Wells have told the officers that there were numerous disputes between them.

DECLARE THREE R. I. TOWNS IN DRY ZONE

Liquor Dealers Furnished Civilian Clothes for Uniformed Men, Is Charged

Providence, Aug. 21.—As a result of liquor dealers furnishing clothes to men in the service so they could patronize the bar, East Greenwich, Narragansett Pier and East Providence are to be classed in the dry zone similar to Newport, according to government officials, who are known to have been investigating charges of defiance of the law.

The investigation is said to have been ordered by William D. Wright, Jr., of Boston, commissioner in charge of the Northwestern Department of Training Activities. According to government officials, certain liquor dealers in the towns referred to had a number of civilian suits tucked away in a special room where men in the service could change their uniform and would, they aver, afterwards indulge in intoxicants.

Other communities where it is charged similar conditions exist are under observation by federal agents.

The Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association officials say they have no sympathy for dealers who "are so brazen as to defy the law, particularly during war time," and are said to have refused to enter a protest to save the accused men.

Lewiston, Me., Aug. 21.—At an early hour today many residents of Nechanics Falls, Norway and Rumford were aroused by earth tremors of unknown origin. SIGHT TANKER IN FLAMES OFF COAST

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 21. — A tanker enveloped in flames and apparently abandoned by her crew, was seen off the American coast by persons on a British steamer from South American ports which arrived here.

The tanker was supposed to have been a U-boat victim, although the steamer encountered no submarine. Passengers on the steamship were able to detect empty davits on the burning tanker, from which it was gathered that the crew had made off in the lifeboats.

No signs of life were seen aboard and the passenger vessel did not venture to approach. Steamship officials declined to disclose the tanker's identity.

To continue this policy in the face of the present condition of the piano market is no easy nor profitable job, and I can't see, as I look into the future, that it is going to be any easier. If it were not my policy to always SELL, regardless of profit or loss, I would hold all the pianos I now have until the busier Fall and Winter seasons and make some money. But, who is sure of what will happen in the future? Buy NOW if you want to be SURE of a bargain.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

SOX TACKLE BROWNS TODAY

Barrows' Brigade Anxious to Make Up for Loss to Indians. Shriners Have Day

By NICK FLATLEY.

The American League pennant winner remains as uncertain as do most other things these days—things like whether there'll be a World's Series or not, or whether the war will end before the Crown Prince finds himself out of breath from running, on the once famous Unter den Linden.

Nothing ever is settled definitely nowadays, and the Red Sox went true to present-time form in their final game with the Cleveland Indians. They were licked, 8 to 4, and in so being, still gave the contenders the wildest kind of an outside chance of ultimate glory.

Our Sox lead by some three games now, and will eventually win beyond a doubt, but they suffer a glorious chance to clinch things, just like all the big guys in the national sport have been doing since the war cloud crossed the Atlantic.

TOO MUCH FOR RUTH.

Manager Barrow wanted to have it settled, so he sent Babe Ruth out to the pitching peak. Babe can do most anything in the matter of athletics, but healing the next best team on Saturday and then being expected to repeat on Tuesday was evidently too much even for him.

With Bush and Mays chafing on the bench, the Battering Ram went out and hurled. He was hammered, but despite that might have wriggled through had his support been up to snuff. But the Red Sox reversed themselves and showed up all sorts of flutters. Frinstance, Harry Hooper lost a couple in the sun, and Scotty muffed one of those brief outfield pops.

There was a high sky and the heavens were against us, as theallens didn't have to contend with any of the weirdly soaring flies that baffled our usually dependable outposts. Big Babe took his medicine for a few rounds and then wilted and finally was yanked.

COUMBE SAVES BAGBY.

Sergeant Jim Bagby opened for the hostiles, and won the game well enough, though he was derricked when the Sox showed a dangerous proclivity to hit in the fifth. Coumbe finished, and proved once more that the Barrow brigade cannot worry a southpaw.

Today the Shriners hold forth at the ball yard, with the St. Louis Browns offering the second competition.

Shriners Day has come to mean a big speed herabouts, and good competition, as the athletes who shine get presents of various kinds from the members of Alepo Temple.

And the Red Sox will be struggling still to put their honors where defeat will not make the slightest difference.

CLOSE CALLS FOR STARS IN PRESS CLUB TOURNEY

Twelve matches went by default in the six divisions in the Press Club golf tournament at Wollaston. In the championship division, Vincent S. Lawrence, medalist, had his hands full defeating R. C. Lehane, Allemarle, 1 up.

Paul Tewksbury, who has two jags on the trophy, also figured in a close match, only vanquishing G. H. Lyall, Bellevue, 1 up. Fred G. Taylor, Wollaston, was soundly trimmed by Eddie Lowery, Lieutenant Francis Quimet's old caddie, 4 and 3.

Today's big match was the Lawrence-Hoxie clash in the lower half.

Golf Tourney at Duxbury

Duxbury, Aug. 21.—The team composed of Mrs. H. B. Stebbins, Miss Eleanor Young, Gordon Donald and Harry N. Pratt won the Salmagundi golf tournament at the Duxbury Golf Club. Their score was 88-16-72. Miss Frances Stebbins, Miss Harriet Allison, George P. Fogg, Jr., and Richard Fenno finished second, 90-16-74.

FIRST GAME IN BOSTON SEPT. 4 IF SOX WIN

Cincinnati, Aug. 21.—The National Baseball Commission met here for the purpose of making plans for the World's Series.

The announcement was made that owing to the closeness of the race in the American League no public announcement would be made as to the plans for the big classic.

Chairman August Herrmann stated that probably within a week the Commission would be ready to announce its plans, providing the race on between Boston and Cleveland has been settled.

Report has it that if the series is between the Red Sox and Chicago Cubs it will open in Boston September 4, three games being played there and the other three, if necessary, in Chicago.

In the event of a tie after the six games, if six should be necessary, a coin will be tossed to decide where the deciding game will be played.

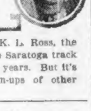
CORBETT'S CORNER

BY JAMES J. CORBETT.



The $75,000 betting "coup" which Commander J. K. L. Ross, the Canadian sportsman, is reported to have put over at the Saratoga track a few days ago, sizes up as one of the biggest of recent years. But it's a "piker" proposition in comparison with the clean-ups of other days of the turf game.

The Ross "killing" is said to have been made through the medium of Canno. The wealthy Canadian, who owns Cudgel, Billy Kelly and other turf stars, figured the Canno as "in."

So about $50,000 was wagered on his chances, at odds that ranged down from 5 to 2 to 1 to 5. It was a huge winning for the generation. But some of those made in the days of Drake, of Keene of Gates and the others dwarfed it.

Undoubtedly the greatest clean-up in the history of the turf was that by John A. Drake when Savable captured the Futurity of 1903. Drake won close to $500,000 himself and John W. Gates and a few others who were on the "inside" and trailed with Savable, won approximately $250,000.

It was perhaps the saddest day the bookmaking fraternity ever has known.

HORSE KEPT UNDER COVER.

Savable, owned by Drake, was sired by the mighty Salvator, holder of the world's record for one mile. Through the early part of the season of 1902, Savable hadn't shown much—in public.

But in private trials, shrouded with the utmost secrecy, he exhibited flights of speed that were nothing short of marvelous.

All during the summer Savable was kept "under wraps" and when time came for the Futurity, which brought together 24 of the speediest youngsters in America, the Drake horse, "doped" as a certain "also-ran," was made an outsider in the betting.

Irish Lad ran in that race, coupled with Aceful, as the Whitney entry. James R. Keene entered Flying Price, Dazzling, the speedy Whitechapel and Duster, and his stable was made favorite at 3 to 1.

The odds of 5 to 1 were quoted against Whitney, with prices of the other horses scaling up to 50 to 1.

And 20 to 1 was quoted against Savable.

Just as soon as the odds were hoisted, the commissioners, acting for Drake, Gates and the other "insiders," quietly circulated through the betting ring.

They covered all the 20 to 1 money that showed and the "bookies" quickly dropped the price to 15 to 1, then to 12 and later to 10 to 1.

GREAT RACE TO THE WIRE.

There was a long delay at the post, but finally the field of 24 got away to a fair start. Savable, ridden by Lyne, broke about seventh and in a good position, and ran in an easy position until the stretch turn was reached. Then Lyne began to move him up.

A sixteenth from home it looked as if the winner would be either Lord of Vale, carrying the Belmont colors, or Dazzling, sporting the Keene silks.

Both were running nose and nose and setting a whirlwind clip. But, of a sudden, Lyne began to ride Savable from his third position, about three lengths back of the leading pair and the Gates colt responded with a burst of speed that set the crowd wild with excitement.

In a flash, Savable had passed the filly and was racing at cyclonic speed to beat the Belmont colt to the wire. Ten yards from home Lord of Vale still led—by a neck. Another jump—and they were nose and nose.

Another mighty jump—and Savable had crossed the finish line a winner in one of the most spectacular races ever run in the historic futurity.

And Drake and Gates collected a fortune.

BRITT WINS ON A FOUL FROM MATT BROCK

By RINGSIDE.

There was much discussion at the Arena last night as to whether the blow which Matt Brock, Cleveland lightweight, landed on Frankie Conley Britt, New Bedford cyclone, when Referee Conley stopped the contest in the seventh round of their twelve-round tussle, was fair or foul.

The boys were having a hot rally when Brock shot his left to Britt's stomach. Britt put up a "holler," claiming it was foul.

Conley stepped in and cautioned Brock, and, during the discussion, the bell rang. Conley produced Britt's "cue," which showed plenty of dents in it. Larry then awarded the contest to Britt.

Brock, up to the time of the alleged foul blow, had taken a beautiful lacing, but was apparently stronger than at any time from the second round.

The Cleveland battler was cautioned repeatedly by Conley for foul work, being warned in the fourth, fifth and sixth rounds for landing his left below the belt line. He proved that he was a dangerous customer at all times, however.

In the first round, while in close, Brock shot a stiff hook to Britt's jaw. The blow didn't travel more than six inches, but there was snap enough to it to floor Frankie.

Britt took the count and Matt sailed in to finish the job. Britt weathered the frame, and what he didn't do to Brock in the line of swat from the second round on was a caution.

Now to get away from the discussion. Charley Parker, clever, ditto hard hitting, South Ender, made short work of Johnny Best, flattening the little Scot after a minute's fighting in the first round. They started mixing at the bell. Then Charley shot his right over. That's all.

George Brooks of Lowell, with his pipe-stem arms, hit Mike Castle a million or more times, but there was no punch behind them.

He slugged enough in Conley's mind to get a draw. It was a scream of a bout, lasting the full six rounds.

Willie Jones of the South End gave Willie Andrews of New Bedford a beautiful lacing in the opening six-rounder.

Billy Kelly Proves He Is King of Turfdom's Juvenile Brigade

By ED CURLEY

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Billy Kelly is some king among the two-year-olds. This corking gelding packed 115 pounds—a crushing burden—gave from fourteen to thirty-five pounds to his rivals, and still won the Grab Bag Handicap.

This was a sprint over six furlongs and Billy ran the route in 1:11 2-5, and for his good work earned $3,350.

Off well, he immediately dropped back off the pace and didn't make his run until he hit the home stretch. Once he got straightened on the final ribbon Billy Kelly spun along like a top and passed the two leaders, Sweep On and Ginger, as if they were tied.

5—Goldvale, Duchess Lace, Trompeuse.
6—Gipsy Queen, Gloomy Gus, Corn Tassel.
Most probable winner — KINGSTOWN PIER.

By BERT E. COLLYER.

Kingstown Pier. Here's a sleeper from Ireland. According to the boys at the track, Captain West brought over a bear-cat in this timber-topper, and, with anything like clear sailing, he'll be on the front end of the procession all the way. Any old price will be a good one.

Poultney is pounds the best in the opening dash. Here's a youngster that clockers say only has to run back to recent trials in order to tin-can all the way.

Trophy should run every post a winning one in the third. He has a world of early speed and they tell me the colt mounts is down hook, line and sinker.

Macomber's star — Motor Cop — should make every post a winning one in the fourth. He's said to be the fastest thing that ever trod on steel.

Lucullite is all over the contender. His recent morning trials have bordered on the sensational.

All the way from the stable comes information that Goldvale is the pickler to be yanked out of the brine-barrel in the fifth. This bird had a lot of hard luck last time out and will be bet on in China today.

Here's where the dirty work starts. The Kentuckians to a man will be down hook, line and sinker on Gipsy Queen.

She's all primed and cocked, and, with anything like decent handling, will be on the front end of the procession all the way and at a decent price, too.

Gloomy Gus has been working like a house afire and looks like the horses they will have to trim. Corn Tassel, Jr., is the horse to be worse than third.

What tobacco is it?
That's the point.
Nature never grew one tobacco that will give you everything you want in a cigarette.
One tobacco has smoothness; one, fragrance; one, body; one, "pep," to let you know you are really smoking.
Get all of these in a cigarette and you'll have a real smoke. That's why, to make the Mecca cigarette they've got to use 12 tobaccos—7 American and 5 Turkish.
They take these twelve tobaccos and mix them—just right—but mixing isn't all. They pass moist heat through them all for 50 hours.
Why?
Because they've got to draw the smoothness and fragrance of the Turkish into the American, and the body and "pep" of the American into the Turkish, until all of the twelve become one tobacco.
This is the famous Still-Blend process.
That's how they get that flavor which has made Mecca the favorite cigarette of over a million smokers.

A New Serial of Young Wedded Life

Mrs. Bryce Takes the Honeymoon Couple to Long Beach and Raises Another Doubt in Anne's Mind

By Ann Lisle

CHAPTER III.

(Copyright, 1918, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

THE quaint little bluebirds and chaffinches of our china home must seem to look to you for me in friendly fashion, as I hurried into my pongee motor coat and prepared to depart them for my boy.

"You'll be happy again, Princess Anne," I could almost fancy them carping, "in the long evening alone with your lover under the stars. Your face will be cool with the mists from the sea, and he'll kiss it and call you Sweet! Sweet!"

I shut the door of our happy little room and ran down to the greater happiness for which I longed.

There stood Jim on the verandah, bending over Betty Bryce with that deferential little stoop of his broad-shoulders and his six feet one, which always makes him seem to be protecting and guarding the woman to whom he's talking. He looked up.

"Here's my little girl, Mrs. Bryce."

Mrs. Bryce held out a slim, gracious hand—it was perfectly manicured, beautifully kept, but just below the knuckles there was a great gash-like red scar.

"So this is our Jimmie-boy's 'Fairy Princess.' All the good wishes in the world, dear Mrs. Harrison. Jimmie is one of the finest, and we knew always that his Princess would be—peaches and cream and sweetness. You'll let an old friend be informal enough to say that, won't you?" Perhaps it was meant to be charming—but to me it sounded patronizing. And it hurt terribly to find out that Jim had not made up the "Princess" just for me, but had talked to Mrs. Bryce about the sort of girl to whom he could love. Why had Jim done that? Men talk of love to women who suggest love to them.

An Onward Struggle

I struggled to get out of my slough of despond and to find an answer for the beautiful, gracious woman who still held my hand in her slim, scarred one. But I couldn't find words. Mrs. Bryce filled in the gap—Jim's friend wasn't awkward like his wife.

"I've a splendid idea if your little Princess doesn't mind. We've a big limousine here and only Miss Moss and I to rattle around in it like two old peas in a much-too-big pod. We're going over to Long Beach to meet some of the boys with whom you and my poor Atherton went across in 1915. Will you come, Mrs. Harrison? Jimmie surely has still a place in his heart for his old pals—and perhaps we can dance a bit."

She swept us along with her to her limousine. It was a great monster of battleship gray with a lining of soft violet whipcord. Mrs. Bryce herself looked like a wonderful orchard in her green coat with the purple cushions framing her. I wondered if she were as cold and unattainable as she looked, or as warm and sweet as she seemed when she spoke to "Jimmie-boy."

Miss Moss was presented—a dull little person with soft gray hair, an apologetic voice and a chin that wabbled like the gelatine we used to have for dessert at my boarding house on Wednesdays. There never was a more colorless, flavorless little lady—somehow she made me think of a poached egg.

Another Little Jar

After a drive that seemed to me hours long I could see lighted hotels and hear the ocean—a great roaring creature, not a murmuring friend like our little bay.

"Jimmie-boy, you and I have a lot to talk over, but that will wait until we get to Towers-by-the-Sea." Mrs. Bryce smiled. "I know that you and the little Princess will want your first glimpse of the place in a wheel chair for two, so Miss Moss and I will go and meet Jack and Tommy."

I wanted just that—but why couldn't Jim have suggested it

We parked our car back of the hotel and Jimmie and I strolled hand in hand up a little slope to the "Boardwalk"—made of cement! We found a wicker rolling chair and a grinning darkey to push us.

Jim sat close to me, his strong, magnetic fingers over mine, his shoulder touching my arm. For a little while I forgot Betty Bryce and my aching wonder of what part she had played in the long years of Jim's life that were unknown to me. The sea was not unfriendly now. It rose up in great surges like the beating of my heart that was so happy because Jim was close and contented to be alone with me. A little wisp of my hair blew out and in the shadow Jim caught it and held it against his lips. I felt almost as if I were folded in his arms. His voice had the deep, caressing notes it seems to hold for me alone.

"Little Anne, little Anne! You're wonderful—and mine—my little Anne!"

The sea sang it over again for him. Then suddenly his voice changed:

"Time's up, girlie, we must go in and meet Betty and the boys."

My heart sank. I wanted to be alone with Jim—to hurry home to our little room of bluebird chintz. I dared not say that.

"I—I—Jim, you'll be ashamed of me. I didn't think we'd get out of the car, and I'm wearing a little tan linen morning dress that's mussed."

"Keep your coat. You don't care for dancing anyway," returned Jim carelessly. He reacts so quickly from his moments of high emotion. I can't.

"Why didn't Jim say he could never be ashamed of me?

"Wait a minute—I want to ask you something. Tell me about—Mrs. Bryce?"

"She's a beautiful and charming woman I met in France—but, child alive, we haven't time to go into that now! Why didn't you ask before?"

Why hadn't I asked him before? Because I had seized our beautiful happy hour alone as if we were never to know another like it. I had been unwilling that even a word of Betty Bryce should intrude. And now I must go back to her, aching with a longing to learn what she had been to my husband, for I know Jim—know that no woman who was "just any woman" could arouse and hold this interest in my Jim.

The Gorgon's Head

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1918, by International Feature Service, Inc.

THE Gorgon was a beautiful woman, of pre-ancient Greece, her head afflicted, writhing hissing serpents, that made her face, when she turned it on the world, a thing of horror and disgust.

Germania is cursed with the Prussian creature, the Kaiser and his sons, who rear about her face and make her an abomination to the rest of the nations.

Some gentle souls have believe that the face she turned them was suffering with the terror and loathing and anguish of her crown; but there's some more of us who believe she "hugs" her serpents and glories in her hideousness.

Great Perseus—our allied soldier, herculean in his varied tan and blue, under the polished metal of his helmet, says: "There's but one difference between this dame and the Gorgon—her face, when she turns it on us, doesn't turn all the world to stone with fear! Though she fondly believed it would. And we'll have her head," swears he, "for the touchstone's mine!"

A Thrilling Story of an American Girl and German Intrigue in This Country

SHE shrugged her shoulders.

"Without flattering you," she answered, "I think I could say that I prefer the second."

"I had an idea," Lutchester remarked diffidently, "that my arrival seemed neither opportune or inopportune—I could not quite tell which. Were you in any way troubled or embarrassed by the presence of the little Japanese gentleman?"

"Of course not," she replied. "Why, he is Jimmy's valet."

"How absurd of me!" Lutchester murmured. "By the bye, if Jimmy is your brother—Mr. Van Teyl—I have a letter to him from a pal in town—Dicky Green. It was to present it that I found my way up here this evening. I was told that he might put me in the way of a little golf during my spare time over here."

He produced the note and laid it upon the table. Pamela glanced at it and then at Lutchester. He was carefully dressed in dinner clothes, black tie and white waistcoat. He was, as usual, perfectly groomed and immaculate. He had what one could only describe for herself as an everyday air about him. He seemed entirely free from any mental pressure or the wear and tear of great events.

"Golf!" she repeated wonderingly. "You expect to have a little spare time, then?"

"Well, I hope so," Lutchester replied. "One must have exercise. By the bye," he went on, "is your brother in, do you happen to know? Perhaps it would be more convenient if I came round in the morning? I am staying in the hotel."

"Oh, for goodness sake, don't go away," Pamela begged. "Jimmy will be here presently, for certain. To tell you the truth, we have been rather playing hide-and-seek this evening, but it hasn't been altogether his fault. Please sit down over there —you will find cigarettes on the sideboard—and talk to me."

"Delighted," he agreed, taking the chair opposite to her. "I suppose you want to know what became of poor Graham?"

A sudden bewilderment appeared in her face. She leaned towards him. Her forehead was knitted, her eyes puzzled. There was a new problem to be solved.

"Why, Mr. Lutchester," she demanded, "how on earth did you get here?"

"Across the Atlantic," he replied amiably. "Bit too far the other way round."

"Yes, but what on?" she persisted. "I went straight on to the Lapland after we parted last week, and only arrived here an hour or so ago. There was no other passenger steamer sailing for three days."

"I was a stowaway," he told her confidentially—"helped to shovel coals all the way over."

"Don't talk nonsense!" she protested a little sharply. "I dislike mysteries. Look at you! A stowaway, indeed! Tell me the truth at once?"

He leaned forward in his chair towards her. An ingenuous smile parted his lips. He had the air of a schoolboy repeating a mischievous secret.

The fact is, Miss Van Teyl," he confided, "I don't want it talked about, you know, but I had a joy ride over."

"A what?"

If You Have Any Hair or Scalp Trouble Read This

Men, women and children do not wash their hair and heads often enough. There has been a mistaken idea for years that frequent washing be bad for the hair. The result is that nearly everybody has more or less hair trouble. Practically everybody has dandruff, and hundreds have hair that is too oily or dry, hair that is faded and lifeless. The result is the hair falls out, and after that comes baldness. There are hundreds of worthless things sold under various names that are said to cure dandruff and make beautiful hair, but you know by experience that they have done little or no good. You also know that common soap and common shampoos leave your hair in a worse condition after you wash them than it was before. It is really strange how people put things on their head when they don't know what they are made of. There is one preparation for the hair, however, that is so good that the ingredients of which it is made are printed on the package. It is called Sirt's Head Wash, and is made of Refined Soap, Cocoin Cocanut Oil, White of Eggs, Glycerin and Salicylic Acid. Any doctor will tell you it is a good formula.—Advertisement.

USED BY OUR ALLIES

CARROT AND HARICOT HOT-POT.

Half a pound of haricot or butter beans—soak for twenty-four hours—six carrots and some other vegetables, such as greens, celery, onions, Jerusalem artichokes and turnips, mixed herbs and spice, salt and pepper to taste, four pints of cold water. Beans should be boiled in the water in which they have been soaked. Add all the vegetables cut into small pieces, and simmer gently for one and a half to two hours. Sprinkle with chopped parsley before serving. A little curry powder added a quarter of an hour before serving is an improvement.

PEPPER SALAD.

Green peppers, 3; olive oil, 2 tablespoons; vinegar, ½ tablespoon; salt, ½ teaspoon; paprika, ½ teaspoon; parsley, chopped, 1 teaspoon; onion, chopped, 1 tablespoon.

Bake peppers until soft and brown. Remove the thin outer skin and the seeds, and cut into inch squares. Sprinkle with the chopped onion and parsley. Make a French dressing of the oil, vinegar and seasonings and pour over the peppers. Chill. Sweet red peppers may be served in this same way. Yield: Two salads, if served with lettuce or some salad green.

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

The new Dean of Durham, the Right Rev. J. E. C. Weldon, D. D., formerly Dean of Manchester, is probably the only high dignitary of the Church to be snapshotted in conversation with a lady of the ballet in full "war paint" behind the scenes.

Bishop Welldon's plain speaking has helped toward his great popularity.

Some time ago he was sitting on foot of a tramcar, and several miners near him were using rather lurid language. Then noticing the Dean, one miner said: "You mustn't mind my mates, guv'nor. We're plain speaking folks, and like to call a spade a spade."

"In that case," replied the Dean, "I should have thought you would call it a d——d spade."

And Mr. Hughes tells this one: He once said to a friend of his:

"That's a swell umbrella you've got there. Did you come by it honestly?"

"I haven't quite figured it out. It started to rain the other day, and I stepped into a doorway to wait till it stopped. Then I saw a young fellow coming along with a nice large umbrella, and I thought if he was going as far as my house I would beg shelter. So I stepped out and asked: 'Where are you going with that umbrella, young fellow?' and he dropped the umbrella and ran."

Handcuffed for Life

TWO PEOPLE THOUGHT THEY WERE

By Cynthia Jackson

WAR has tied many hard knots, and it has untied others.

What looked like a hopeless impasse before the war has now straightened itself out into two straight, smooth, clear-cut roads that may run parallel but can never meet. What is best of all each road stands some chance of reaching a goal which neither could attain before.

A number of years ago, for a mess of pottage, the woman had sold her birthright—her woman's right to be loved and honored and respected. Now she's lost the pottage, and who can say but that in this topsy-turvy world she may get her birthright again?

An Intelligent Woman

She is such an intelligent, interesting woman. She treats every subject with a delicate touch and a fine sense of discrimination so that it is very hard to realize that she at one time took a strangle-hold upon a man's life and condemned him to life-long imprisonment at hard labor. His offence was that he had asked her to marry him when he was young and foolish and inexperienced and didn't know his own mind and in friendly puppy fashion had proposed to the first nice girl he met.

Maybe he should have been punished, a little bit, but, dear me, if we were all punished so severely for changing our minds we would be serving sentences in some one's jail all the time.

He was a fine manly man. He had a keen sense of humor. He left it entirely to the woman. He did not love her, not as a man should love a wife, and he never had. He knew that now beyond the shadow of a doubt—now that he had met The One Woman. Still he had asked her to marry him, and if she wished it, in spite of what he had told her, he was a man of his word.

And how did this intelligent and capable woman measure up to this power of life and death which was placed in her hands? She sentenced him to life-long imprisonment. She demanded the protection of his name, that he treat her as his wife in the eyes of the world and that he keep a roof over her head.

But one fact this woman forgot to reckon with, and that was that in turning the key on this man she was locking herself up at the same time. And so she sold her birthright! She was young and attractive and had all of life before her, and yet she clutched feverishly at the husks of a loveless marriage.

And then "the One Man" came along. If she had ever imagined she loved her husband she now knew, too, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that she did not love him—not as a wife should love her husband—and never had loved him. And to think the one man should find her shut up in a prison of her own fashioning!

It would almost seem as if some one ought to have slipped in a file to one or the other of that unhappy couple and let them work their way out to freedom again, but it couldn't be done. Their jailer was "What will people think?" and he is the hardest jailer in the world to escape from.

Release at Last

The man had risen very high in his profession, and at all costs domestic scandals must be kept away. The woman's social relations had become so complicated and interwoven with so many different interests that separation from the husband would have meant tearing them all up by the roots.

So they went dragging each other around in a helpless, hopeless fashion. They had no more in common than two prisoners that have been handcuffed together. Their enforced nearness only made them the more odious to each other.

Only a miracle could separate this unhappy pair, and that miracle came in the shape of the war. Like a great earthquake it tore the hinges off of their prison door and set them free. The man volunteered at once. His profession made him of supreme value at the front. And when he returns, if he ever does return, the world will be too indifferent to inquire if they decide to break the bonds that have bound them so long.

BIG SALES FOR MOTOR TRUCKS EXPECTED

By C. F. DONNOCKER.

As the vacation season begins to wane the motor truck dealers are able to size up the situation for Fall business and from the opinions of several the outlook for selling trucks this Fall is very good.

C. M. Thayer, manager of the Sandow Motor Truck Company of New England, believes that there will be a good business.

"The average merchant who has been depending upon the railroads for transportation has become convinced that conditions along that line will not be any better this year and that if they intend to keep up their former delivery schedules they must use the motor truck," says Mr. Thayer.

"Our business the past few weeks has been remarkably good for August and there seems to be a general demand for trucks of all sizes and not any one special model. The Sandow has been doing yeoman service in and about Boston since its introduction here and I fully believe that this Fall will be a very good business season."

G. A. R. Veterans See 'Night Bombardment in the Trenches'

Portland, Ore., Aug. 21. — An imitation of a night bombardment in the front line trenches was staged for the delegates at the fifty-second annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic here when a monster pyrotechnic display was staged for the benefit of the veterans.

The outing followed the annual parade which broke all records in that no single case of exhaustion was reported.

Practically none of the veterans left the line of march.

DEDICATION AT RADIO SCHOOL PLANNED

Big New Instruction Hall to Be Opened There on August 30

By S. HENRY FERRIS.

U. S. Radio School, Cambridge, Aug. 21.—Plans are being completed for exercises dedicating the big new instruction hall on the Palfrey estate that has been taken over by the government.

They will take place on the evening of August 30 and will constitute the most elaborate event of the kind that has taken place since the Radio School was opened.

For the evening the new hall will be thrown open to civilians who are invited by and accompanied by sailors of the school.

One of the most interesting features of the evening will be a military drill, with the manual of arms, by the boys of the school.

Following this there will be a party on the lawn with the sailors as hosts, and with outdoor dancing as a part of the entertainment.

For the evening the two Radio bands will be combined under the leadership of Bandmaster Moore, and the members of the newly organized orchestra of the "Y" but will be present to furnish music for dancing.

About eighteen hundred Radio sailors will sleep tonight in two of the new barracks in Radio City on the Cambridge Common. The electric lighting equipment is not complete, and the boys will be obliged to find their way to bed with the aid of candles or such light as may filter through the trees from the city's lighting system.

The "Happy Hours," with its anticipated wrestling match between Jones and Jeanette, that was planned for Thursday evening, has been postponed for a week.

Russell Van Billard, Walter W. Rich and C. A. Kelting, formerly rated as gunners at the Radio School, are now ensigns in the Naval Reserve Force.

The yeowomen connected with the school can now have an opportunity to learn to swim. The tank at the Oliver Hazard Perry School, East Seventh street, South Boston, will be open for their use hereafter every Thursday afternoon at 5:45 o'clock.

Melrose Priest Chaplain

Rev. William J. Lillis, junior curate at St. Mary's Church, Melrose, will report at Camp Taylor, Ky., on Friday for duty as a chaplain in the army with the rank of lieutenant.

Lifer Works Outside; Spends Week Ends Only in Cell

Rutland, Vt., Aug. 21.—A life convict who for more than eighteen years had not seen the world from the outside of the stern and high walls of the Vermont State Prison at Windsor, now travels between this city and the prison twice a week, unattended and on his own honor.

Owing to the scarcity of labor, it was impossible to find a machinist who could repair the shirt stitching machines in the House of Correction at Rutland, and so John Weeks of Middlebury, State superintendent of the penal institutions, after a conference with Governor Graham succeeded in getting official sanction to the plan which is now in operation.

The "lifer" leaves Windsor prison Monday and remains in Rutland until Saturday, when he returns to his cell for the week-end.

SHORT SHIP CIRCUIT; FORECAST FOR TODAY

By GUS DALY.

Today's card at Combination Park, Medford, embraces three good classes, with large fields carded to start. The stake for three-year-old trotters is an open one.

Harold Burke's Silent Brigadier has raced well all season and should win first money and medals.

The 2:14 pace has a fair field. Miss Rhoda should score, with Miss Key and Don McKinney trailing her.

The 2:24 pacing stake, worth $1,000, is the day's feature. As Frank Dowey has no entry eligible, it will be a grand contest, with Minnequa Boy favored over Silver King second best to Boy third.

Yesterday's sport was witnessed by an immense crowd. Tom Donohue, electing to go in the 2:16 pace, instead of the 2:24 class, won in three straights.

Ross Watts turned the tables and defeated the local favorite, Balen, in three heats in the 2:24 trotting stake. Captain Volo had but three trips to go before he captured the big end of the 2:16 pace, while the 2:10½ is a track record for trotters.

The amateur sweepstake event was won by Dewaretta, driven by John Pilgard.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN AUGUST 21, 1918. BOSTON.

The War After the War

Propaganda of Premier Lloyd George, Most Unwise on the Face of It, Must Have Some Other Meaning Than Has Been Explained to Us

Mr. Lloyd George, the British Premier, is apparently conducting a propaganda to promote a war-after-the-war. As we understand it, Mr. Lloyd George proposes a league of the Entente nations now at war with the Central Powers, to continue after the war an economic commercial alliance against our present enemies. We are not sure that we quite understand the British Premier's object or the method by which he proposes to accomplish it.

The AMERICAN has always regarded David Lloyd George as the first statesman in Europe, and the most heroic champion of democracy in the world until our own President Wilson began to formulate the policies and to interpret the principles of democracy for America and the Allies, since the entrance of America into the war. Therefore we are very ready to assume that the Premier's attitude upon "the war after the war" is not fully understood in America. So far as any explanation at all has been vouchsafed in America, the proposal seems to be for a commercial and economic war after this war, UNDER ANY CIRCUMSTANCES. We cannot believe that the plan thus nakedly stated is the whole plan and nothing but the plan. But if we do not understand it in America, it will certainly not be understood in Germany, and will strike the mind of the German people as evidence of that implacable hostility of her enemies, including America, which the German autocracy has sedulously alleged to exist.

At the very outset, President Wilson, speaking for the American people, with equal strength of policy and of principle, rejected the idea of a "war after the war." If there is any one obstacle to permanent and universal peace, it is the continuance of the old-fashioned attempt by political combinations to tamper with the world's trade and the natural development of nations. That is the foundation of nine-tenths of the wars of mankind. When nations stop the attempt to conquer trade by force of arms, and to exclude other nations from commerce by the same means, the world will rid itself of nearly all the causes of war.

If there is anything which will make this war, however decisive the military results may be, an inconclusive war it will be the attempt to maintain the spirit of hostility among the great nations after it is over.

But not only is the naked, unqualified proposal to wage a war after the war vicious upon general principles, but it is most unwise in the present situation of our great world conflict. We must never forget that we are waging a war to make the world safe for democracy. We want to keep our eyes on that idea as we march and fight through the gloom of this tragic struggle, as the storm-tossed wayfarer keeps his eye on the North Star.

President Wilson has declared over and over again that we are not waging a war against the German people as such, but against German autocracy. We have invited the German people to overthrow that autocracy, to take possession of their own government, and after having demonstrated to us the fact that they have at last become their own masters, and that they not only can speak for themselves but can carry out their own agreements, to approach us for a discussion of the terms of peace. Our position is that we cannot make peace with the German autocracy because the German autocracy has announced that a treaty of peace is a mere scrap of paper.

It is true that for a moment, in one of his messages to Congress, President Wilson wavered on the question of making peace with the German autocracy, and entered into an old-fashioned discussion of war spoils. But it was only a momentary weakness from which the President recovered immediately, and he now shows by his attitude towards Russia that his recovery is permanent.

The German people understand our attitude. President Wilson's speeches have had a much wider circulation in Germany than most of us suppose. So far the German people have not attempted to accept our terms for several potent reasons. They involve some slight humiliation because they are in the nature of outside dictation, which is always disagreeable both to nations and to individuals. Moreover, our proposal came at a time when the German victory was at its flood and the Germans were naturally intoxicated by their great military successes, which they had been assured by army leaders, whose capacity had been demonstrated, could not be impaired by American intervention. Almost one year after America declared war the Germans won two of their greatest victories—both on the western front.

But now the American intervention is beginning to be felt. The utter failure of the last German offensive and the success of the Allied counter-offensive indicate that the tide has turned. The depression of the German people will rapidly accelerate from this moment. Already they have perceived the inaccuracy and short-sightedness of their military leaders concerning the submarine campaign. In a few months more they will begin to see very clearly the fallability of their military leaders, if not their deception, concerning the power which America can exert in the war. We may confidently expect, therefore, that the prestige of their autocracy will be gone in a few months more. So will the hope of victory by arms.

When the German people realize that their military power has merely proved a trap that involved them in a disastrous war, and that it could not defend them successfully after they became involved, is it not clear that this military autocracy, which they never liked, will become so much an object of their hatred that we have only to refrain from driving them to despair, to make the overthrow of their autocracy certain?

When the tide of battle turns against them, what is the one thing that will make them cling to their military autocracy with the resolution of despair?

Is not the fact that the German people know they must face a war, after the war; that their place in the sun is to be denied to them by their enemies, and with it the opportunity to rebuild their country and to restore their destroyed prosperity by the labor, the sacrifices and the efficiencies of peace; is not this the one thing which will make the German masses reel on in the desperate hope that one of those accidents, which have so often in history turned defeat into victory, will occur before their power of resistance is completely overcome?

The German masses were stampeded into an acceptance of this war by the assertions of their political, military and industrial leaders, and their newspapers, that it was a defensive war—that they were facing a world of enemies who were jealous of German prosperity and fearful of the German peaceful conquest through superior efficiency and thoroughness.

The revelations of Prince Linchnowsky, the German ambassador to Great Britain at the outbreak of the war, have shattered the claim of their autocracy that it was a defensive war. Nothing after the Linchnowsky revelation can persuade the German people that this war was a defensive war, or that their commercial rivals forced it upon them in order to deny them their place in the sun and equality of place in the competition for the trade of the world, except the organization by responsible leaders among their enemies of a league to carry on just such a commercial war against them; to shut out the markets of the world from them, and to deny them the raw materials with which to build up their industries, and thus to help to recreate the lost and destroyed wealth of the world.

If this war is really a war to make democracy safe on earth; if our object is really to destroy German autocracy and militarism and to set up self-government in Germany; then we will not do anything which will prevent the German people from overthrowing their autocracy.

Let any intelligent American citizen put himself in the place of a German workingman today. Let him assume that this workingman hates this war, that he is thoroughly discouraged and now believes that victory cannot be obtained. Let him assume that before the war he was a member of the largest party in Germany—the Socialist party—and, therefore, did not believe in a great German military establishment and in the German autocracy. Let him assume further that since the publication of the Linchnowsky memorandum his belief that it was a defensive war has been shaken, and that he is now gravely suspicious that Germany was entirely guilty for the war. Let him assume further that he understands and believes our profession that we do not fight against the German masses as such, but only to enable and compel them to overthrow the government which is responsible for the war, and to govern themselves, and that he understands also that negotiations for that peace for which he longs so much can be obtained by establishing democracy in Germany. But let him be further faced with the fact that after peace comes, Germany will be absolutely prostrate—absolutely naked of raw materials, with no internal capacity to produce raw materials; that the world trade will be gone; that her industries will be disjointed and disorganized. What hope of returning prosperity and happiness will he have from peace, if he cannot obtain the raw materials with which to produce the wealth that has given Germany her extraordinary pre-eminence in the arts of peace? Knowing that Germany is not self-sustaining, as this war has proven; knowing that in order to regain even livable conditions under the blessings of peace, she must have the freedom of the world's markets and an opportunity to obtain raw materials, isn't it clear that he will see himself and Germany condemned under such conditions to poverty and even famine indefinitely?

Therefore, are we not sure, by the formation of this league to carry on a war after the war, to say in effect to the Germans:

"Force your heart and nerve and sinew
To serve your turn long after they are gone,
And so hold on when there is nothing in you
Except the Will which says to them 'Hold on!'"

Are the American masses, the fathers and mothers and wives and brothers and sisters, prepared to fill foreign graves with the bodies of their sons a single day longer than is necessary to make the world safe for democracy by compelling the German people to overthrow their autocracy, set up their own government, and sue for peace, prepared to make good the injuries for which they are responsible because they supinely submitted to the will of an arbitrary, irresponsible, outlaw government?

We can conceive of no justification for an economic war after this war, unless the war ends in a stalemate and autocracy is not overthrown in Germany. These considerations seem so clear and so powerful against an economic league against Germany after the war that we do not believe that Lloyd George has been correctly quoted concerning the details and the object of his plan. He is the last man in Europe whom we should expect to join in any such scheme. Mr. Lloyd George must have in mind a plan quite different from the one which has been explained to us.

As Brave as Her Boy

VEILS---By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

This poem was written in France by the famous poetess, who has been doing war work there

VEILS, everywhere float veils; veils long and black
Framing white faces, ofttimes young and fair,
But, like a rose, touched by untimely frost,
Showing the blighting marks of sorrow's track.

Veils, veils, veils everywhere!
They tell the cost
Of man-made war. They show the awful toll
Paid by the hearts of women for the crimes—
The age-old crimes, by selfishness ill named
"Justice" and "Honor" and "The Call of Fate."
High words men use to hide their low estate.

About the joy and beauty of this world
A long black veil is furled.
Even the face of Heaven itself seems lost
Behind a veil. It takes a fervent soul
In these tense times
To visualize a God, so long defamed
By insolent lips, that send out prayers and prate
Of God's collaboration in dark deeds.
So foul they put to shame the fiends of hell.

Yet One does dwell
In Secret Centres of the Universe—
The Mighty Maker, and He hears and heeds
The still small voice of soulful, selfless faith;
And He is lifting now the veil of death,
So long down dropped between those worlds and earth.
Yea! He is giving faith a great new birth
By letting echoes from the hidden places,
Where dwell our dead, fall on love's listening ear.
Hearken, and you shall hear
The messages which come from those star spaces!

That is the reason why
God let so many die:
That the vast hordes of suffering hearts might wake
Mighty vibrations, and the silence break
Between the neighboring worlds, and lift the veil
'Twixt life on earth and life Beyond. All hail
To great Jehovah, who has given life
Eternal, everlasting, after strife.

Veils, long black veils, you shall be bridal white—
Eyes blind with tears, you shall receive your sight,
And see your dead alive in Worlds of Light.

The Fish Trust Indictment

Attorney-General Attwill has again given the people of Massachusetts a comfortable sensation of confidence in his independent and vigorous administration of his office as chief prosecutor of the Commonwealth.

The indictments which he has secured against those alleged to have been guilty of monopolizing fish, a necessary of life, is the kind of proceeding which has a salutary influence upon gentlemen who are disposed to profiteer at the expense of the people's necessaries.

The AMERICAN does not attempt to prejudge the guilt of any of these men. The result of the work, or, at any rate, of those who are actively responsible for the conduct of this fish company, is certainly clear and certainly evil. There is no prevention against this kind of profiteering equal to the shadow of the jail.

If, on the other hand, it shall appear that the Attorney-General's dragnet was spread too wide and caught some who did not really know what was going on in the administration of this fish business, but were merely innocent participants in a general organization, Mr. Attwill will be the first one to separate them from their guilty associates, if there are any guilty associates.

At Sixteen One Longs to Break Loose—Miss Black Tells of Young Girl Who Thought Movie Stage Was Calling

By Winifred Black

SHE wants to be a picture star!
She says the screen is calling.

"I hear it calling louder and louder every day. I know how to make up motion picture stories, too. They are so good that my girl friends will not believe that I made them up myself, but they are my stories. I am only sixteen years of age and heartbroken. Please tell me what to do."

And her name is Olive and she says she is really very pretty, only she is freckled some, and her hair isn't curly at all, but if she does it up very carefully at night it looks very much as if it were naturally curly when she takes it out of the papers. Also she has small feet and very nice hands, but her ears don't please her. Her nose is excellent, and her eyes, she declares, are very large indeed and, some say, fascinating.

She has a good home, but it is very commonplace and she yearns a good deal, especially evenings after the sun has gone down and before the electric lights are lit. She leans out of the window and looks up at the sky, and it is then she hears the screen calling her. Sometimes she feels so very tragic about it that she feels that she ought to go out on some big bridge and end it all.

No, there is nothing particularly bad about her life, but her father and mother think that if a girl has three meals a day and enough decent clothes to wear that is all there is to it. All parents may not be like this, but hers are very material and commonplace—they don't seem to know she has a soul at all, and she knows there is something wrong.

Misunderstood Life.

Perhaps she isn't their child at all, but adopted from some gypsy, and it is the wild something she has inherited from her gypsy parent that makes her so restless. Why, when the hand organ man plays tunes outside she feels a real inspiration; but if she says a word about it her mother just laughs and begins to talk about something else.

And oh, it is so very terrible! What, what shall she do?

Don't you laugh. I felt like it at first, but when I read the letter over again I felt more like crying, for I remembered the days of my own misunderstood life when my mother wouldn't let me go to the party just because I had a little bit of sore throat that might not amount to anything, and the moon was shining and all the roses were in bloom, and I had to stay at home with an ice pack on my throat. It wasn't the staying at home I minded so much, but it was just because I had to be ruled by people who could not get beyond a mere sordid sore throat.

And once, at another time, when I wanted a beautiful party cape, such as the rest of the girls had, I couldn't have it because I had a perfectly comfortable wrap. I didn't mind about the cape so much, but to be the child of any one who was so cold and unsympathetic was almost more than I could bear.

My Experience

One day my mother heard me talking to another girl about it, and she came and took me in her lap and laughed and cried and told me about the time she made up her mind to run away and go on the stage, and another time when she fell in love with a circus rider, and the time she decided she must be an orphan because her mother didn't understand her at all, and from that minute life began to be a good deal better for me.

I wonder if it wouldn't be a good thing for the mothers to look back and see how miserable and misunderstood they felt when they were about sixteen.

Have you a little daughter at home? Do you know anything about her except what she wears and what she eats and when she goes to bed? How much does she tell you of her real inner life, and when she does try to tell you do you laugh and are you too busy to listen? I don't believe I would do that, if I were you. Sometimes it turns out to be—dangerous.
